

Evangelistic Film To Show in Irma September 21

OILTOWN, U.S.A., beautiful color, sound motion picture, and latest release from the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association will be shown in Kiefer's Hall in Irma on September 21 commencing at 8 p.m.

BILLY GRAHAM

This feature length motion picture, is centered around Billy Graham's evangelistic crusade in Houston, Texas, last summer, and not only features the Graham team, but also such outstanding Christian motion picture artists as Colleen Townsend Evans, Paul Power, Georgia Lee, Robert Clarke, Cindy Walker, Redd Harper and Ralph Ward.

Incidental music is supplied by Andy Parker and the Plainsmen and the musical score was arranged by Ralph Carmichael. Dick Ross of Great Commission Films directed and produced the film.

The plot revolves around a rich oil magnate, played by actor Paul Power, and his beautiful daughter, played by actress Colleen Townsend whose wealth and social life have kept them far from the principals of Christianity. Their chance meeting with converts of the Graham crusade begins an unexpected and exciting train of events which go to make a dynamic and appealing religious motion picture.

OILTOWN, U.S.A., is a sequel to the popular "MR. TEXAS" film.

A special feature of the evening is a ten-minute newsreel of the first four weeks of the London Crusade at Harringay Arena will be shown.

No admission charge. A free-will offering will be received to defray expenses.

Northern Nuggets

District residents enjoyed a pleasant evening on Saturday when Miss Edith Jones who was home with a friend for the long week-end, showed some of her pictures at Albert school. These were scenes of Eastern Canada and the U.S.A., Mexico and Guatemala. Miss Frances Bars also had some pictures of Eastern Canada and of a trail ride she had taken in the mountains last year. Everyone enjoys travelling with the girls in this fashion, and we hope they will soon be home again to show us more.

Tuesday, September 7, was a red letter day for all the youngsters in this area as they eagerly stepped into the brand new school bus driven by Mr. W. Synnington on route 1 to Albert school. Mrs. Howard Schreyer teaches grades IV to IX, with an enrolment of 25, and Mrs. Larson has I to III with an enrolment of 20. The following beginners are in grade I, Janet Prior, Gloria Bars, Claudia Ramsay, Barbara Hardy, Clinton Coulman, Alan McRoberts, Trevor Jones, Dickie Allen, Richard Larson and Terry Ramsay.

Mrs. Percy Prosser had the company of her sister and of her niece, Miss Eleanor Meyer, last week. Miss Genevieve Meyer has also been home visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. John Meyer of the Ross district.

Letterbox

Irma, Alberta,
September 7, 1954

Dear Madam: I beg the use of your paper to inform the district of certain school policies.

The school will be unlocked each morning at 8:40. The noon hour is being shortened by 15 minutes to last from 12 to 1. Children who go home for lunch at noon are requested not to return to the school until 12:45 except to play outside or when they are assigned to the auditorium.

Parents of country pupils will probably have noticed that the Council of the Village of Irma has protested against the practice of students leaving the school grounds during recess or noon periods. It is not the intention of the school to prevent children from doing errands requested by parents. We do feel, however, that the privilege has been abused in the past.

In the future we will require that town students do not leave the school grounds during either recess. Country students may leave only after the lunchroom has been dismissed at approximately 12:30, or at afternoon recess. We ask that parents of country students appoint one member of the family (preferably an older member, if possible) to do all the family errands. We feel that co-operation of parents, teachers and students should eliminate the problem.

Since the request came from the Village Council in the interests of public safety, we solicit from them a somewhat stern enforcement of the speed limit and other traffic regulations.

Yours gratefully,
D. H. Gunn, Principal,
Irma School.

WORKING WITH CANADIANS IN EVERY WALK OF LIFE SINCE 1817

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY

FOURTH OFFENSE

By PHIL GLANZER

THERE was sweat on Piny Quinn's brow—beaded sweat, that stood out on his white skin. His brow was hot from the fire that raged in his brain—glittered in his eyes. Eyes of the human rat who faces that final rap of the criminal, the fourth offense.

His pinched face was paler than usual and his nostrils pulsed with his rapid, audible breathing. He had been looking into that light for three hours, but he did not break. Piny Quinn was of stranger stuff than his appearance indicated.

Back of the light sat Inspector Janey. The black, unlighted glare between his stern lips was the only real looking thing about him. The rest was as of granite. The grey hair, the bushy brows, the solid, blue-black eyes and the heavy Irish nose. All granite, for that was the fibre of Inspector Janey.

For three hours he had sat there and grilled the man before him, listening to the repeated denials of guilt; to the same unchangeable tilt, watching the same jerky nervous movements of Piny Quinn. He wanted to prove what he already knew. That Piny Quinn had entered the home of G. W. Van Dyne and stolen a sapphire necklace valued at one hundred thousand dollars, but he feared to place the meager evidence before the grand jury. A confession would simplify matters.

Janey spoke again and his voice was still calm.

"For the last time, Piny," he said, "I'm telling you to come against you to send you up."

"I ain't seen the necklace you're talking about. I never even heard of it until it was stole. I tell you I was in the Bronx the night it was lifted."

"Sure you were in the Bronx. That's why nobody saw you there. Where are your witnesses? Who saw you? Who can prove that you were there?"

"You just leave me out of here and I can prove where I was that night," Piny whined.

"Sure you can. Anybody can get an alibi witness."

Piny pulled at his already loosened collar. He was in a corner and he knew it. But he realized that his only chance was to keep up his front and hope for a break.

"If yuh got so much on me," he blurted out, "why bother about a confession? Send me up with the evidence yuh got!"

"So you want evidence," Janey roared in a voice that shook Piny to the depths of his soul.

"Proof is what you want, is it? Well, I'll give you evidence. I'll tell you how you pulled the job. You were the butler for the Van Dyne after you finished that third stretch in the pen. You were with the for three months and learned all about the sapphire necklace, and that it was kept in the wall safe. Somehow you obtained the combination to the safe and had a key made to open the house."

"Then you quit," so that suspicion would not fall on you when you pulled the job. You watched your chance. The Van Dyne left town for the weekend and you entered the house while the servants were asleep, took the necklace, hid the stones somewhere and lay low, figuring that you could beat any rap with a phony alibi.

"You had the setup for a perfect crime, but you were just like all the rest of the crooks. You didn't see little slip that upset the whole works."

He switched on the sound box that was on his desk and spoke into it. "Tell Jerry to come take some prints and send in a copy of the one we took from the Van Dyne wall safe. Tell him to snap it up."

Piny trembled as Jerry took his white, woman's hand and inked the index finger up.

Evidence he had asked for evidence.

Calmly and methodically Jerry placed another card on the desk and compared the two. For a long, silent moment he inspected them through the magnifying glass which he took from his pocket.

Then he walked around the desk and laid them before the Inspector. He placed the glass on top and, picking up his outfit, he left the room.

Inspector Janey sat for a while and studied the two cards. Then he reached over the desk and laid them before Piny Quinn. He placed the magnifying glass on top of them and leaned back in his chair. "Take a look," he invited.

With a hand that trembled Piny Quinn took up the glass and studied the prints before him. The breath went out of him as he looked up. The two prints were identical.

"All right," he muttered. "Yuh got me. I done it. I lifted the necklace."

His hand still shaking, he signed a statement given him by the secretary.

"It's my print all right," he said as he laid down the pen, "but I don't see how it got on the safe. I wiped the front off good with my handkerchief."

Inspector Janey permitted himself to smile slightly as he folded the statement. "Did I say the print was on the safe? How careless of me to make a mistake like that. The print you saw was the one they took the last time you were sent up the river. When you pulled that Van Dyne job you didn't leave a mark behind!" (Copyright Western Newspaper Syndicate)

Mural type decoration

REGINA.—Art in a bus depot—but not the "stuffed shirt" type nor yet the moderate sort where a sunset map look like a fried egg.

The well-known Regina artist, McGregor (Mac) Hone is now working on decorations in the Regina Depot lunch of Sask. Transportation Co., which set a new high, low, or something, in bus depot decorations, according to General Manager Frank Copthorne.

Regular travellers on the buses and regular patrons of the Depot Lunch may see themselves in Mr. Hone's mural. All types are represented—people from the country, mechanics from nearby garages who drop in for the odd cup of coffee, sweeter girls, soldiers, stenographers, small boys and statesmen—and all with a light-hearted air.

The venture in lowbrow art is, as far as is known, the first time a bus depot lunch has been decorated in such a manner. Mr. Copthorne said, "but not the last, we hope."

Seldom do artists—serious artists, that is, work under the conditions under which Mr. Hone is doing this project, he said. The depot lunch is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week, except for the hours from 2.30 in the morning to 6.30 and that is when he works; what Mr. Hone thinks of his new working hours is not recorded.

Mr. Hone is Art teacher at Regina's Central Collegiate and his pictures are frequently shown at local and national exhibitions. He studied in his early days in Saskatoon under the late Gus Kenderline whose contribution to the Arts in the province was commemorated by the unveiling of a memorial by the Art Colony at Murray Point, Emma Lake, recently.

THE TILLERS

Puppet show tours Alberta

Four University of Alberta students have completed a 3,000-mile tour of Alberta with their puppet show, consisting of 23 hand-operated puppets.

The puppeteers—Clara Angel-vet of Provost, Sheila Monaghan and Carl Hare of Edmonton and Gilbert Brinsmead of Bagshaw—now agree that "there's no business like show business."

Alberta had not seen anything like the puppet show since the 1930s. The four students, long planning a tour of some sort, believed audiences would be ripe for this type of entertainment.

Their belief proved to be right. Bookings were readily arranged through the schools by the Provincial Department of Cultural Activities. Charging 25 cents admission, the students netted $300 each during five weeks on the road.

The puppet stage was a structure with wooden framework, about seven feet high, five feet wide and three feet deep. Below the stage proper was a curtained section in which all four puppeteers crouched. With up to six puppets on stage at once, it was often difficult to find a spare hand among the group to work light switches, sound effects and other equipment.

The four have been active in theatrical work at the university and applied experience gained from the live stage to their puppet show. Costumes and makeup were designed for effect rather than realism. The sets were lighted on the same principles as the modern stage, with dimouts and color changes producing the correct moods.

STAR FEATURE—THE LUNCH BOX

The lunch box carried to work or school each day can be a very tasty and inviting meal if a little extra care is taken with it. It should never be just a snack—it must take the place of a regular meal and be just as important.

Proteins, minerals and vitamins must be considered so that the meal is well balanced. Meat, eggs, cheese or fish for proteins and other nutrients; wholegrain bread and vegetables, such as carrot sticks as well as fruit and plenty of milk, will help to make the lunch box meal a really nutritious one.

Agriculture growing in Manitoba

Farming is Manitoba's most important industry and steadily growing according to the Hon. R. D. Robertson, minister of agriculture and immigration.

The minister makes this statement in the foreword of a Key-stone which has just been published by the department of industry and commerce. Some highlights of the brochure are:

More than 10,000,000 acres of land are under farm production in the province.

Over 40,000 Manitoba farms operate with electricity compared with 18,000 in Alberta and 12,000 in Saskatchewan.

Field crops account for seven million acres of total land under production.

Manitoba is the only producer of Kentucky Blue Grass.

Manitoba's sunflower crop is expected to exceed $1 million annually.

Within a 100-mile radius of Winnipeg enough sugar beets are grown to produce $4 million worth of sugar each year.

Manitoba has a $7 million market gardening industry.

Manitoba's livestock industry has an annual value of nearly $100,000,000.

1,000,000 pounds of milk are produced each year in the province from which is manufactured 25,000 pounds of butter, 2,000,000 gallons of ice cream, 1,500,000 pounds of cheddar cheese and over 1,000,000 pounds of cottage and cream cheese.

There are over 1,000 beekeepers in Manitoba operating about 35,000 colonies to produce about $ million pounds of honey each year.

Manitoba's poultry industry is now a $50 million industry.

A special section of the brochure tells of the importance of the work of 4-H clubs in the province.

You can't go ALL-OUT

If you feel ALL-IN

These days most people work under pressure, very much under stress. The strain on body and brain makes physical fitness easier to lose—harder to regain. Today's tense living, longer working hours, overwork, worry—any of these may affect normal kidney action. When kidneys get out of order, excess acids and wastes remain in the system. Then backache, disturbed rest, that heavy-headed feeling often follow. That's the time to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's stimulate the kidneys to normal action. Then you feel better—sleep better—work better. Ask for Dodd's Kidney Pills at any drug counter.

A Bank is useful in so many ways...

At a bank, you can keep important papers and other valuables in a private safety deposit box.

Travellers Cheques and Letters of Credit provide a safe, handy source of funds when you travel.

A bank helps you do business at a distance; sells exchange, transfers funds, makes collections.

A bank is much more than just a place to cash a cheque or deposit your savings. The many services it provides are designed to help you handle money matters more simply, safely, easily. You will find bank people courteous and efficient in handling routine banking matters and helpful, too, when unusual problems arise. Don't hesitate to "see the bank about it."
